OVERVIEW

The goal of this symposium is to provide participants with the tools to deliver high quality care to patients and families with serious illness.

Palliative and supportive care is an imperative part of high-quality cancer care. Care of the cancer patient can be challenging to healthcare workers. Advanced practice providers are essential leaders in clinical care, value-based care delivery, nursing practice, research and policy.

This symposium is designed to offer educational updates on complex pain management, serious illness conversations, and psychiatric needs of the cancer patient and family in the community and acute care setting. The symposium will provide the latest developments in use of medical marijuana and telemedicine. There will be presentations by leaders in palliative care on caregiver distress, geriatrics, and leadership roles. In addition, there will be breakout sessions where providers can choose from topics such as global palliative care, pediatrics, and spiritual distress.

Learning Objectives

By attending this symposium, attendees will:

- Understand the role of the advance practice provider in the delivery of palliative care, including roles in research, policy, and leadership.
- Apply interdisciplinary approaches to address illness-related psychological reactions, psychiatric conditions, and to assist with family communication and coping.
- Understand the ethical dilemmas encountered in palliative care, employing best practices using a multi-disciplinary approach.
- Describe innovative pain and symptom management methods for patients with advanced disease.
- Understand new advances for effective communication with patients in the advance stages of cancer or life limiting illness and provide quality end of life care.

Target Audience

Focused on the care of seriously ill patients, this program is appropriate for nurse practitioners, physicians, physician assistants, nurses, social workers, and other allied providers regardless of specialty palliative care or oncology experience.
